Two breakthroughs in the ministry of Paul

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER

AN AMAZING BREAK-THROUGH!

Lesson for May 1, 1983

Bible Study Passage: Acts 16:9-18

Introduction

This week's lesson carries us through two significant breakthroughs in the ministry of Paul. One of Paul's major breakthroughs was his trip to Macedonia. This marked the Gospel's first entry into European soil.

The other breakthrough was Paul teaching of women. The cultural condition of Paul's day gave women little status or power. In many ways women were powerless to act or assert themselves. They were mainly treated as slaves and sexual objects.

Many women today still carry this oppressive burden. They have little power in this male dominant culture to become the "equal" God intended for them to be. We men have "enjoyed" the female in the dependent role we've placed them in. How dependent we men are upon having someone dependent upon us!

In the church women have experienced further oppression. How were we ever duped into making the church a sexist institution? Paul shows us how the Gospel began to breech sexual and cultural barriers by his own example.

A Vision and a Voice [Acts 16:9-12]

Paul was in Troas when he had a vision and heard a voice calling to him, "Come over and help us." When the phone rings late at night we may nearly jump out of our skins in anticipation of bad news. The voice on the other end cries out, "I know I awoke you from your sleep, but I need you."

We normally do not have to think about whether we will or will not go. We simply dress and go. The call for help is too powerful to ignore altogether.

When Paul heard the call he wasted no time in responding. To delay our response to a need is to miss an opportunity to minister to Christ. Sometimes we make elaborate plans to do the work of ministry, but we must take care not to let the plan interfere with our ministry. The issue is not if we will respond but what will we do.

A Businesswoman Converted [Acts 16:13-15]

Women in business is still strange to our ears, but more and more women are finding their rightful place in a highly competitive male market.

I first heard of Lydia when I was a freshman at Bluefield College. My Bible prof introduced his students to women in the Bible.

Lydia was obviously a successful businesswoman as a seller of purple dye and cloth. She was well acquainted with fashion trends in her native city of Thyatira. Upon hearing the Gospel from Paul she immediately responded and was baptized along with her household. Following her baptism Lydia invited Paul and his troup to stay at her home.

In some churchly circles women remain seen and not heard. I doubt that Jesus would support the exclusion of women in certian positions within the church. Women may serve very effectively as leaders in the church and in society. Some church exclude women from holding the office of deacon based upon a strictly male interpretation of the scriptures and an outdated theological stance.

In the business world women have often received lesser wages for the same job simply because they happen to be female. In marriage women often discover they have entered a prison where doors to freedom are perpetually locked.

What is the meaning of Paul's preaching that in Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek, male or female?

The church needs to rethink its theology of women in the church and world and remember that there are both sheroes and heroes in our biblical ancestry!

The Raider Review

By PHIL AGEE

Spring sports are now into full swing and ACHS is fairing quite well.

The Raider baseball team under the direction of head coach Howard Clabough, is once again on top of the district standings. With an 8-2 record, the Raiders are being closely trailed by Liberty, Gretna, Altavista, and Nelson County.

From top to bottom, the Seminole District is one of the more balanced districts in baseball this year. Senior pitcher Tim Bennett stated, "The winner of the Seminole District should do well in regional competition. It's going to be a tight race all the way."

Coach Tolley's Raiderette softball team is also having an outstanding season. The Raiderettes are currently 6-2. Top performers on this year's squad are Robin Paulette and Cindy Covington.

Tennis has been a bright spot for both the boys' and girls' team. The boys are currently 4-2 overall and have a 3-2 district mark. The girls' team record is 4-2.

Leading the boys so far has been junior Freddy Lawson. Lawson is also getting good support from John Booker, Bobby Carter, Rick Caldwell, and James Beaty. Patty Roach and Laurie Cowan lead the way for the girls.

The ACHS track teams have also been a pleasant surprise this year. Charles Walker and Ruby Smith have proved to be outstanding performers in each of their meets.
